Wright was represented by Gary Young Jr. of Lincoln and the case was prosecuted by assistant Nebraska Attorney General David Bydalek. The case was investigated by the Nebraska State Patrol.

2024 will mark the year new water meters were installed at homes and businesses here in Elgin.

The Elgin City Council, meeting last week, were updated on the progress being made so far.

Installation of the new meters began last week with City Hall making appointments for installers. According to City Clerk Kristin Childers, she has been assisting Sue Vanis with the appointment process.

Employees with Rutjens Construction are doing the installation. The process, Childers said, takes approximately 30 minutes to complete.

As part of the water meter project, the council approved a motion to replace, where necessary, a ball valve at a cost of approximately $100 to be paid by the homeowner

Steven continues long road to recovery following cow attack last September

By Jane Schuchardt

Special to The Elgin Review

Editor's Note: This continues a series of monthly articles celebrating pride in our town and its surroundings shown through the experience of residents and organizations.

It's called caring. Some compassion, too. And definitely love. It's called Elgin.

What is it about a small town? We celebrate successes and major life events. We also rally around those who have fallen upon one malady or another - car and machinery accidents, serious health concerns, property damage from natural disasters.

The surprise attack to Steven Schrunk, rural Elgin, on September 27, 2023 by a 1,600-pound Angus momma cow is a recent example.

It was a regular morning of chores for Schrunk, a daily move of 65 cow/ calf pairs owned by Thiele Dairy, Clearwater, from one pasture paddock to another, a task his dad, Ellis, has done for more than a quarter century. Then, pow, without warning, he heard bellowing and she attacked from behind. Judging from the bodily damage, the strikes came not once, not twice, but multiple times.

Honestly, Schrunk doesn't remember much of the details that day. Luckily, he was able to get on his four-wheeler, head home about a mile away, call his wife, Janna, and a neighbor to be sure the cattle gates were closed. Though he regrets not thinking to call 9-1-1, he recalled his impassioned words, "A cow got me down; I'm really messed up. I need to get to the hospital."

With towels soaking up his bleeding face, Janna drove him to Albion. No ambulance was close, and needing immediate medical attention, Schrunk was medevacked by helicopter to the University of Nebraska Medical Center, Omaha. "It was a 40-minute ride, I was sitting up, so I got to see the countryside," Schrunk quipped as he and Janna shared tears and embraces during this interview.

After two weeks and two days hospitalized, first in intensive care and then in the trauma unit, Schrunk is clear about this, "Please don't focus on my injuries (which were substantial); tell people the community rallied around me. Thanks just isn't enough.'

Janna kept a thorough journal each day, detailing the medical procedures to attend to back and neck injuries, a shattered jaw, and more. "I'm not sure

"It's to the homeowners advantage to have it (the ball valve) replaced." said City Street Superintendent Donnie Poulsen, Jr.

In other action:

New member — The council approved the addition of Savannah Wiseman to the Elgin Volunteer Fire Department/Elgin Rescue Squad.

Fill cracks — The council approved the purchase of 'cubes' to fill street cracks at a cost of $5,500. Fixing the cracks will begin sometime this spring.

Whistle — Councilman Jim Kittelson asked to see if there was anyway the fire whistle could be activated in Neligh in a way similar to the existing process between Oakdale and Neligh. He said when there is a need for storm watch, someone has to blow the whishour.

Much of the meeting revolved around issues related to matters involving the city's existing solid waste management agreement contract with Bud's Sanitation.

The council passed two resolutions. They were:

1) A resolution to become part of the Northeast Nebraska Solid Waste Coalition

According to City Clerk Kristin Childers, the coalition has more than 20 members which works on waste management issues which may arise.

2) A resolution to appoint a local representation to the coalition's board of directors.

Chosen by the council to serve on the board was councilman Leigh Kluthe.

how the word got out," Janna said with thankful humility. Close friends asked her where they could send money to help with expenses while she kept a constant vigil by her husband's side. Their children, Nicholas and Meghan set up an account at the Bank of Elgin for monetary help and also an account on www.caringbridge.org where she could post updates on Steven's condition.

Though Janna doesn't quite know what inspired her to adopt the motto "we got this," it was the tagline for every post to CaringBridge and Facebook.

The first three days were awful." Janna recalled. "Twelve doctors were standing out front (of Steven's room). It was a little overwhelming, and then I could see the fear in Steven's eyes (upon entering the hospital room), the fear of not knowing.'

Now, three and half months out, Steven awaits complete healing of his jaw. He can't open his mouth fully and must eat soft foods. He also engages in physical therapy multiple times a week for his neck and shoulder. Schrunk said one of his darkest moments was when he literally couldn't breathe, and an anesthesiologist knew just what to do. Now with Steven getting clearance to drive, Janna admitted she continues to live in fear that Steven will get bumped the wrong way or succumb to another life-threatening accident.

"We will never be able to say thank you enough for the thoughts, prayers, and support," Janna said with tears streaming down her face. Individuals contributed thousands of dollars. Community groups, such as the Elgin Bargain Box, Elgin Ko-Ed Group (EKG), Bartlett Lion's Club, Wheeler County Farm Bureau and Lion's Club, among others, all pitched in. One individual donor sent the strong message, definitely embraced by all, "That's what we do here.

The Elgin Community Center and Elgin Homestead apartment complex, where Janna works, had caring people step up to keep the doors open while Janna stood by Steven's side. Thiele Dairy personnel stepped up to do chores and neighbors helped Steven's parents as needed. The medical personnel also get high marks.

Though Schrunk can't quite smile broadly yet, due to his jaw injuries, the caring, compassion, and love he's experienced from the Elgin and Bartlett communities make him happy. When pastures start growing again come spring, Schrunk said, if he gets medical clearance, he'll be out there with the cattle again, though this time being far less trusting of animals that could cause serious injuries and even take a human life. About the cow who maimed him, Schrunk said, "She went home, and I don't know her number, so I'll probably (unknowingly) see her again come spring.

Excitement, reservations come with 2024

I have always loved celebrating New Year's. It's exciting to think about a new year and all the possibilities.

We can reflect on the year that is ending, making resolutions for the upcoming year, or just enjoy celebrating with friends and family.

This year, I'm just as excited about what 2024 may hold, but it comes with some reservations.

As I've mentioned before, I lost my job a few months ago. I've worked most of my life, so this is the first time I've ever been without employment.

know a lot of individuals have traveled this road before me. However, it brings uneasiness as I think about the uncertainty that lies ahead for me and my family

The thing is, I could probably go out and get some sort of job if push comes to shove. What's really bothering me is that age old question, "What do I want to do?"

And the answer is, I don't know. I don't know if I want to go back to what I was doing before. I don't know if I want to try something new.

I don't know if I want to work full-time or part-time. I just don't know.

What I do know is that I need to do something. To make ends meet and make us more comfortable, I need to find something to help support my family. I know that I want something flexible so I can be at soccer practices or pick up a sick child, if need be.

I also know that I want something fulfilling. I don't just want to earn a paycheck, although I'll do it if it comes to that. I want to feel as though I'm doing something meaningful.

I realize that this is a luxury and that a lot of people must take whatever they can get to provide for their families.

I'm aware of how very fortunate I am that I have some time to make this decision. It doesn't make it any less daunting, though. My kids and friends are constantly asking for updates on the job search. I feel pressure to decide, but I've also never been happier in my life. For the first time, I get to spend my time doing what I want to do. I have time to clean the floors, worrying about the time clock. For me, this new year really comes with endless possibilities. That scares the pants off me but it's also exciting in some ways. I plan to take some time to think back on 2023 and really pray for 2024 and the direction I should take.

I hope that none of you are in the same boat in that you have recently lost employment. What I do hope is that you'll take some time to reflect on what really matters and think about your new year. What do you want for 2024? Where do you want to spend your time and focus your energy? Praying that everyone has a safe, happy, and fulfilling new year.

Letters to the editor

Writer questions how city's water, sewer rates affect customers

Dear Editor,

What you are about to read basically concerns people who get their water from Elgin, however; it is important for all to read.

Have you ever really checked your water bill? Doesn't it seem strange that the sewer part of the bill does not correspond with the water usage? When my husband questioned City Clerk Kristin Childers about this, he was told that our water bills get averaged for the first three months of the year because in the winter months less water is used by most (not all) of the people. As a result, the sewer part of your water bill is also averaged. The average amount for the sewer part of the bill is then used for the remainder of the year.

That might sound complicated, so let me put it to you this way... think about going out to eat with a group of friends. and when the bill comes, someone has the idea to evenly split the bill. Essentially, the person who ordered a burger would pay more than their food actually cost, while the one who had steak and a beer would be paying less

In the same way regarding the water - if you happen to use more water in the winter, then you'd end up having a high standard for which you are averaged. Based on that, even if you don't use much water in the summer months (you don't water much or have a sprinkler system), you'd be stuck paying a high amount (way more than your bill would actually be). The reason for this is that in the summer, people like to have green lawns but do not want to pay the high sewer fee this would incur, because most of this water does not go into the sewer. It gets absorbed by the ground.

As a result, the council decided to average the first three months for everyone to pitch in and subsidize these green lawn loving people with their sewer part of the bill. Personally, I like brown lawns in the summer because they turn green with the first rainfall.

The sad part is when these people water their lawns during rain storms. Sprinkler systems can be turned off during these times but why bother when you get subsidized? I went with my daughter to a council meeting to find out why this was being done only to get the same answer my husband had gotten. Truthfully, if you have a sprinkler system and want to do this – it really is great… but it is extremely unfair, in my opinion, for those of us who do not. We end up paying way more than we owe. I think there should be an option for if you want your bill averaged, or if you just want your actual bill. Sadly (but not surprising), I received snarky remarks from Mr. Dvorak and Mr. Niewohner concerning my questions. I waited a few months more before I went to another meeting, asking again why we are subsidizing people's sewer bills. This time the story changed -typical gaslighting: "this was never said", "you [Judith] do not remember it correctly", "the money was used for something else", etc. However they want to spin it, I feel it is immoral, unethical, and- to my belief-illegal to take our money for this purpose without our consent. This is stealing our money. How many other times has our money been stolen and used for things other than what it was earmarked for? If anyone wishes to donate to the "Green Lawn Sewer Fund", great! Have at it! I just want to pay what I honestly owe. Apparently, that's too much to ask. Judith Orlowski

When COVID-19 hit, it made sense and it was necessary, to identify a way to feed kids in need that didn't require person-to-person interaction. The federally funded Pandemic Electronic Benefits Transfer (P-EBT) was born from that era. It has now morphed into the Summer EBT program - one that front loads money onto cards for the purchase of $40 of groceries per child per month, capping at $120 per recipient.

Addressing food insecurity is important and necessary, but the S-EBT program is not necessary and it is not adequate to meeting the needs of children. I would be the activities take place. There is an opportunity for socialization with peers and on-site supervision and personal contact with adults who can spot signs in kids who have more needs than a meal. Sites usually have links to resources designed to support children and their families, as they hopefully, work their way out of food insecurity.

The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) is another federal program administered by the state that provides food benefits to low-income families. In fiscal year (FY) 2023, 156,399 Nebraskans received SNAP benefits, at a cost of nearly $28 million a month. In addition to purchasing food, users have access to nutrition education and employment and training services.

Nebraska is committed to helping kids and families in need. Our programs are focused on more than simply providing food. They offer a hand up, not a handout.

Introducing 'Ricketts Replies'

Government should be open, effec-tive, and responsive. It should serve taxpayers well.

In our system, the best way to ensure a high level of customer service is for Americans to have meaningful, transparent communication with those who represent them.

Since entering the Senate, I've made it a priority to offer Nebraskans a variety of ways to stay connected. This year I've held in-person meetings and events across Nebraska. Our team has hosted Mobile Office Hours in every Nebraska county.

Quarterly telephone townhalls and Instagram Q&As allow folks to ask me questions directly from wherever they are. Nebraskans have multiple ways to share their perspective with me. Still, we can always do more.

That's why in 2024 I'm launching a new initiative to enhance our communication with Nebraskans: "Ricketts Replies.²

our office. Our new series, Ricketts Replies, will let your voice be heard and questions answered in a new way.

Here's how it'll work: each month, I will read and respond on camera to a sampling of letters from constituents. The issues will range from the border crisis to the rising cost of living and more.

These responses will be featured on my social media accounts and on my website.

I hope this will provide another transparent forum for addressing your questions. I'll share undates on no matters and discuss the issues facing our country. Your stories matter. Your perspectives matter. Your good ideas will continue to guide me as I fight for Nebraska in the United States Senate. Ricketts Replies will supplement the great work my team is already doing for constituents. In addition to meeting with Nebraskans on policy and legislative matters, our four permanent offices across the state offer a variety of constituent services for those navigating the federal bureaucracy. My team hosted Mobile Office Hours in all 93 counties to further assist Nebraskans with casework needs. We also launched a new feature on our website where you can request a Mobile Office Hour in your community. As we navigate the complex challenges facing our nation, I believe everyone should have the opportunity to feel connected to the people who fight for them. My hope is that Ricketts Replies will strengthen the ties that bind us as Nebraskans. I'm excited for the conversations and insights that Ricketts Replies will bring as we work toward a more prosperous future for our country. Whether you have questions about proposed legislation, want to share your perspective on an issue, or are having problems navigating the bureaucracy, my team and I are here to serve you. Contact us anytime by phone at 202-224-4224 or on my website atwww. ricketts.senate.gov/contact. I'm honored to be your voice in Washington and will continue looking for ways to better serve you. Happy New Year!

Editor's note: According to the Nebraska Rural Water Association, approximately half of Nebraska municipalities calculate their sewer rate in the same manner as Elgin (a flat rate plus a usage rate, based on the first quarter usage). The first quarter usage is utilized because it is considered the time of the year that water is going into the sewer lines versus other quarters where people could be using the water on their lawns and gardens.

The governor doesn't believe in welfare

The hole keeps getting deeper.

Remember when I suggested someone should give the governor a shovel so he could dig a deeper hole for himself?

That was when he had refused to CAPITOL VIEW read a published report on high Nebraska Press Association levels of nitrates organizations in the United States for several years.

Then came Governor Jim Pillen's mandate that all state employees should work from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in an office so they can be face-to-face with the public. No data. Just his firm belief that everybody ought to be in the office from 8 to 5.

Will the Governor who commutes every day, at our expense, from his home in Columbus to the Capitol mind his own mandate? Really? You need to ask? Will the courts decide that the employee union will prevail and make the Pillen mandate subject to contract negotiations?

But his latest dig with the shovel likely really deepens the hole. In response to an opportunity to receive federal money for a program that will feed Nebraska kids during the summer if they currently participate in a school lunch program, Pillen said "no" to the funds because "I don't believe in welfare.'

The $18 million would be distributed to 150,000 Nebraska children - those kids who Pillen says he loves and wants to protect - who are currently receiving free school lunches because of food insecurity. It would cost the state $300.000 to administer. That's a healthy return on investment. It's money already due Nebraska and will go to another state if we don't use it.

There's the data supporting the need. Not counting the fact that 15 state senators have signed a petition supporting the program. Advocacy groups have also offered positive words about it while cautioning that food insecurity is a growing concern.

But Pillen, the Prince of the Pejorative, has cast "welfare" in the worst light, appealing to the sense and sensibility of an age where it was us versus "those people."

Will somebody point out to the current governor that many of the 1,200 employees of Pillen Farms are likely to have children eligible for the program?

But Pillen says we don't need it because we will take care of those kids who are out there in the community at church camps and in 4-H instead of at home on welfare.

Is it a generational thing, this misunderstanding of how the programs work and what the recipients need? I'm sure that a list of eligible kids compared with a list of those likely to join 4-H would have very few matches.

It's called food insecurity Governor. Perhaps your staffer who doesn't filter the stupid comments you make could spend some time researching the topic of food insecurity and brief you on it.

That might change some of your pig-headed thinking, oh Prince of the Pejorative. *****

He said the defendant needs more time to get insurance. A $1,500 personal recognizance bond is continued.

Thomas R. Miller, 54, of Petersburg appeared, without counsel, for further arraignment on a Class 2 misdemeanor,

Warrants issued over pickup, ATV theft

County Attorney Joe Smith requested continuance. He said he had requested reports from the Antelope County sheriff's office but had not received them. Taylor continued arraignment to Feb. 7.

Miller asked for refund of his bail.

Taylor denied the request, "You will get it back when the case is done.'

Newell Douglas, 53, of Petersburg will have his bail returned, less a 10% processing fee and $51 court costs. Smith dismissed three Class 4 felony counts of issuing bad checks, second offense, upon Douglas' payment of $531.37 restitution.

felony charges of theft by unlawful taking. Taylor set bond at $20,000, 10% cash, for each of them. Meuret reported the theft of the Polaris/tires Nov. 14. The Polaris was found abandoned in a field with no key.

Farrier and Birman were arrested Nov. 19 and were alleged to have possession of the Ford. A key to the Polaris was reportedly found in the cab and tires were in the bed of the truck.

ers, Elgin Public-Pope John came up big when it mattered most to defeat Bloomfield 51 to 45 Saturday night in non-conference boys basketball action.

Nick Anderson and Myles Kittelson, starting in the place of Jarek Erickson and Gage Thiessen, and their teammates won the second half to earn their eighth victory of the season.

"Guys had to play different roles tonight," Coach Matt Euse said. "The victory shows how well these guys can face adversity.'

Both team suffered through a rough first half as each side struggled to score. That all changed in the second half as both teams found their shooting touch.

After a trey by Beau Eisenhauer gave the Bees a four-point lead early in the third quarter, the Wolfpack exploded. Sandwiched in between two-point baskets by Anderson and Kittelson, sophomore Karson Kallhoff drained three consecutive treys as EPPJ took a 26 to 21 lead.

Spinning Tales

Saturday is the best day for sports, tell the NFL

ELGIN — Has there ever been a better day for sports than Saturday?

Some might prefer Sundays, others Friday, but I think Saturdays were meant not just for fighting, but scoring as well.

I began to ponder these thoughts watching the Wolfpack take the court to play Bloomfield. Earlier in the day I was at Summerland for their wrestling invite. Granted, the wrestling tournament was a boys-only event, the best part about the gathering of grapplers was that it took place on a Satur-SPINNING day TALES Most of any more stirred up, I know you work every day of the week, your hours are determined by the task at hand. You work when you have to until the job gets done, then you get up the next day and do the same again and again and again.

Yet, when I look up in the stands when I'm not looking through a camera lens, I see farmers and bankers, ranchers and medical workers, I see county employees, city ones too, watching and cheering what is taking place on the court/mats.

Saturdays are perfect for high school games, whether they play in the afternoon or evening. It allows more fans the opportunity to attend. It's almost like God made sands gather at their favorite stadium to cheer on their team. Some are alums, some are alums-in-waiting, others are just there because they love the sport or the team.

Saturdays are great for not only sports, but live concerts. The best concerts in Nebraska are on Saturday nights, Sunday nights are a close second. The Eagles were the first concert at Pinnacle Bank Arena in Lincoln when it opened. Bob Seger put on a great show on a Sunday night in March a couple of years ago. The Steve Miller Band at Pinewood Bowl last August and REO Speedwagon at the Orpheum were held on Saturday nights this past year. Sir Elton John rocked 'The Bob' on a Saturday night long ago. Eric Clapton put on a heckuva show at Kemper Arena in Kansas City on a Saturday. I saw KISS on a weeknight at Pershing when I was at UNL, that goes way back. KISS was big, but not nearly as big as they became.

Speaking of concerts, the only concerts I regret missing were Bruce Springsteen & The E Street Band at Devaney in 1984 and, a couple of years ago, Steely Dan at the Pinewood Bowl.

I've seen a lot of concerts through the years - all kinds of acts like Headeast, Waylon

Jennings, Three Dog Night, Joan Jett, George Strait, CCR, Alice Cooper, Tom Petty, Hank Williams, Jr., Kansas, Foreigner, Sammy Hagar, John Mellencamp, ZZ Top. Almost all of these concerts were on Saturdays or Sundays

What are these key strokes all about? The answer is Saturday. Why does the biggest sporting event in America - the Super Bowl - always get played on a Sunday night. Between the conference championship games and the Super Bowl, there are 14 days. The game is always played in the evening, ending around 10 p.m. just in time for putting the kids to bed so they can go to school the next morning while parents fight to get through the day with a headache, sometimes of epic proportions.

If they played the Super Bowl on a Saturday night, Sunday could be used as a day to recuperate. Why doesn't it happen? Because the big bad shield (NFL) has too many corporate sponsors with too many tents serving too many drinks to fans of substance. Have you ever thought about the ticket prices to go to the game? They are high if you can get them legally, the scalpers hike the price to the point that the every day common man cannot afford to attend the game.

That's okay for me. If they don't want to play the game on a Saturday night, then I'm not going to be going anytime soon. Unless my great nephew Travis Vokolek, now a member of the Arizona Cardinals, takes the field. Then, I won't miss it for the world.

Beef herd Measures of Performance - Part III

We've been discussing Measures of Cow Herd Performance, including calculating pounds of calf weaned per cow exposed. While doing so we concluded that while weaning weight is important, it is not the best measure of cow herd performance. To increase weaning weight, emphasis is often placed on increased milk production, increased

This often results in increased feed costs for the herd, which can offset the benefit of a heavier calf if not watched.

Today, we are going to shift gears and talk about ways to positively impact post-partum interval (PPI) and pregnancy rates. Consider the following criteria for an efficient beef cow herd:

Calving interval (number 1) of days between calves) is 365 days or less.

2) Females raise a calf to weaning.

Cow mature weight and 3)

milk production fit the resources and need little to no extra feed or supplements.

If the calving interval is 365 days or less, a cow or heifer must be rebred and be pregnant by about 80 to 85 days after calving (gestation is 280 to 285 days). To make this happen, we must understand the factors that impact the post-partum interval length.

The post-partum interval (PPI) is the time from calving until the cow resumes a fertile estrous cycle. After calving, cows will enter post-partum anestrus. Anestrus means cows are not exhibiting normal estrous cycles and cannot become pregnant. Under "ideal" conditions, the anestrus lasts 40 to 60 days in beef females. During this time, uterine involution (the uterus returns to normal size) occurs and she prepares herself for the next pregnancy (Managing Postpartum Anestrus in Beef Cows for a Successful Breeding Season). If conditions are not ideal, PPI can last 100 days or more. What factors impact the post-partum interval? Cow age - 2 and 3-year-old females have longer PPI.

Body condition at calving thin cows, BCS 4 and less have longer PPI.

Calving difficulty - dystocia lengthens PPI.

Because first-calf heifers have a longer PPI, they should be bred to calve their first calf ahead of the mature cow herd. Even with ideal management for reproductive performance, first-calf heifers will have a longer PPI, so they need extra time post-calving to get ready reproductively to become pregnant with their second calf. Breeding to a calving ease bull is also recommended.

Looking to animal condition, feed cows to calve in BCS of 5, and first-calf-females to calve in BCS of 6. Depending on feeds available, first-calvers will likely require some supplementation to get to BCS 6 prior to calving. For the mature (3-years-old and older) cows, if they can be in BCS 5 before calving with little to no supplementation that would indicate milk production and mature weight fit the feed/ forage resources. If replacement heifers are selected from within the herd and mature cows must continually be fed extra feeds and supplements to get them to ideal body condition before calving, then reevaluate your breeding program. It may indicate mature cow weight is increasing, milk production is increasing, or both are increasing at the same time.

Using these indicators, producers can track herd performance over time and see how management and year affect productivity, as well as compare themselves to regional benchmarks. Good records, however, are key to using these indicators, so plan how your record keeping can be improved next year knowing what indicators to keep an eye out for. - Ben Beckman is a beef systems Extension Educator serving the counties of Antelope, Cedar, Knox, Madison and Pierce. Judge finds Oakdale man guilty of nuisance

By Sandy Schroth

court reporter

Shane Sleister of Oakdale appeared in the Antelope County courtroom in Neligh last week, for trial on an Oakdale nuisance violation, alleged last February on his property at 606 Rath Street.

Special village assistant attorney, Joe Smith, had previously offered a deal after some abatement work was completed by the defendant. Smith agreed to dismiss the charge if Sleister paid $50 court costs. Sleister did not comply and the case was set for trial.

Sleister, who was selfrepresented, told the Honorable Donna Taylor that two vehicles that remain near his home need transmissions, which are there but he is unable to complete the work because his tools are in a pickup being held at the county impound yard. He said he had asked for them to be released "seven or eight times." some vehicles on the He said

Sleister's property.

Taylor asked Sleister if he had any evidence. When he began to explain, she told him he would first need to take the witness stand and be sworn in.

Slesiter replied, "I'm good" and declined giving sworn testimony.

When he subsequently said he hadn't received a letter and didn't have an opportunity to get the property cleaned up, Taylor stopped him.

You said you didn't want to be sworn and tell the truth," she said. "This was filed...and the village has met (its) burden of proof.

She also reminded Sleister the case resulting in the impound of his tools was filed in September, "You had six months...(and) there were many beneficial offers (that) didn't work out.'

She found Sleister guilty and set sentencing March 6. Sleister also appeared for pretrial hearing on two charges alleged Sept. 20, Count I, flight to avoid arrest, a Class 1 misdemeanor, and Count II. driving under suspensio
